Carmen

At a free spay/neuter event offered by PETA Latino to residents in underserved areas of Mexico, a staffer met a thin, abandoned puppy who was riddled with fleas and internal parasites and whose fearfulness made it clear that she'd been treated unkindly. Named Carmen, the pup loaded up on healthy food at PETA's headquarters in Virginia—the Sam Simon Center—and was doted on by adoring staff members, one of whom fostered her. Her foster status was quickly upgraded to permanent family member, and her adopter says, "Carmen has helped my elderly dog, Bear, put the walker down and really blossom. They are the best of friends."
